I have the privilege of expressing a deep sense of gratitude and appreciation to my guide Professor M. S. YADAV, Centre of Advanced Study in Education, M.S. University of Baroda who has helped me conceptualise this present study and who, inspite of his intense involvement in his administrative and academic duties, has always been forthcoming with his invaluable help and guidance.

The H.P. University, Simla along with its Directorate of Correspondence Courses (DCC) which is the subject of the present study, has been totally accessible to me and extremely co-operative. I am specially indebted to Professor K.P. Pandey, Director of the DCC, Faculty members of the DCC and the Post Graduate Study Centre, and administrative staff of the DCC and the Registrar's Office for extending full support and co-operation, without which the successful completion of the present study would have been an impossibility. I also thank all the respondents who have taken pain to fill in lengthy questionnaires and spared time for prolonged interviews.

Over and above his official role on this study as the Head and Dean of the School of Education of the H.P. University, Professor Lokesh Koul has rendered the most invaluable personal help during the data collection and analysis, giving me such insights into the process of research which I will always cherish. I should also mention Dr. Kulwinder Singh, Post doctoral Fellow of the H.P. University for his kind help during data collection and Mr. Prashant R. Nayak, Junior Engineer, IPCL, Baroda, for his assistance in tabulation.

I have all through been inspired, motivated and helped by my friends, teachers and colleagues in completing this work. I have the pleasure of expressing my profound appreciation and gratitude to all of them.

I also thank Mr. Kanubhai A. Patel who has taken a lot of pain to type out the thesis with all care and sincerity.
