

LIST OF THE TABLES

Table No.		Page
3.1	Sample of the Study	95
4.1	Respondents of the Three Groups	106
4.2	The Agencies Which Organized the Orientation Programme	107
4.3 (a)	The Opinion of Respondents About the Helpfulness of the Orientation Programme	108
4.3 (b)	Different Aspects of the Orientation Programme Showing the Utility	109
4.3 (c)	The Reasons Given Against the Orientation Programme	110
4.4 (a)	The Opinion of Respondents Towards Objectives of the Orientation Programme	113
4.4 (b)	Difference of Mean Scores of the Male and Female Participants About Objectives of the Programmes	115
4.4 (c)	Difference of Mean Scores of the Different Groups About Objectives of the Programme	116
4.5 (a)	The Preferences of Orientation Programme by the Respondents at Different Stages of Their Professional Growth	118
4.5 (b)	The Reasons Given by the Respondents Explaining Their Preferences Mentioned in Table 4.5 (a)	119
4.6 (a)	The Duration of the Preservice Education Programme	122
4.6 (b)	The Duration of the Inservice Education Programme	123
4.7	Opinion of the Groups Regarding Satisfaction of Existing Examination System	124
4.8	The Need of Orientation in the Evaluation Techniques	124
4.9 (a)	The Opinion of Different Groups About the Influence of Examination System on Today's Teaching-Learning Process	125

Table No.		Page
4.9 (b)	The Opinion of the Groups Regarding the Possibility of Remediating of the Present Evaluation System	126
4.9 (c)	The Remedial Measures to be Adopted for Improving Existing System of Examination	126
4.10 (a)	The Respondents who Acted as Consultants in the Orientation Programmes	128
4.10 (b)	The Policy About the Appointment of the Consultants in Orientation Programme	129
4.11 (a)	Helpfulness of the Orientation Programme in the Teaching Profession	130
4.11 (b)	The Various Aspects in Which the Orientation Programme was Found Helpful to the Participants	131
4.12	The Attitude of the University Teachers Towards Seeking Opinion Regarding Their Teaching	133
4.13 (a)	Evaluation of Lecture/Teaching of the Participants	133
4.13 (b)	The Methods of Checking the Classroom Instruction	134
4.14 (a)	The Utility of the Orientation Programme to Check One's Teaching Efficiency	135
4.14 (b)	The Opinion Regarding Further Improvement in Teaching on the Basis of Checking	135
4.14 (c)	The Various Aspects of Improvement in Teaching	136
4.15 (a)	The Opinion Regarding the Evaluation of Participants at the End of the Orientation Programme	137
4.15 (b)	The Suggested Methods by Which the Participants Could Be Evaluated	138
4.16 (a)	Guidance During the Orientation Programme to Improve the Examination System	140

Table No.		Page
4.16 (b)	The Utility of the Evaluation Techniques Discussed During Orientation Programme	140
4.16 (c)	Evaluation Techniques Which Were Helpful	141
4.17	The Effectiveness of Instructional Approaches Which Were Adopted During Orientation Programme	142
4.18	To What Extent Participants Have Been Benefitted With Respect To Various Aspects of the Orientation Programme	146
4.19	Opinions Regarding the Need of Such Courses After an Interval Off Five Years	152
4.20	Professional Difficulties Experienced by the Participants Before Joining the Orientation Course	153
4.21	The Ways in Which the Orientation Programme Has Helped the Participants to Overcome the Professional Problems	156
4.22	Suggestions by the Groups for Improvement of the Orientation Programme	158
4.23	The Mean Scores of the Groups on Attitude Scale	165
4.24	Difference in Attitude Between Trained and Untrained Groups	167
4.25	Difference in Attitudes Between Twenty-one(21) Combinations of Seven(7) Groups	168
4.26	Difference of Mean Scores Between Male and Female Teachers in Attitude Towards Orientation Programme	170
4.27	Difference of Mean Scores Between Teachers Having Below and Above 5 Years of Teaching Experiences in Attitude Towards Orientation Programme	171
4.28 (a)	Difference in Attitude on Two Tests of University Teachers	173
4.28 (b)	Difference in Attitude on Two Tests of University Teachers	173

Table No.		Page
4.29	The Distribution of the Items of the Attitude Scale	176
4.30	The Attitude Towards Different Aspects of the Programme	177
4.31 (a)	Attitude of the Participants Towards Different Aspects of the Programme	180
4.31 (b)	The Coefficient of Correlation (ρ) Between the Groups	180
4.32	Percentage of Participants' Attitude	182
4.33	Graphs Represents the Attitude of the Participants in Percentage	183
4.34	Objectives of the Course	184
4.35	Course Outline of Educational Philosophy and Sociology	189
4.36	Course Outline of Educational Psychology and Statistics	191
4.37	Course Outline of Administration, Curriculum and Problems of Indian Higher Education	193
4.38	Course Outline of Teaching Methods and Evaluation	194
4.39	Practical Work and Responses Given by the Participants	197

LIST OF THE CHARTS

1	Different Aspects of Orientation Programmes of Higher Education in Various Institutions	34-40
2	Proposed Syllabus at a Glance	198-199
