Undoubtedly, pursuing a Ph.D. has a fair share of challenges. Early on, I encountered setbacks when some of my experiments failed but those led me to reopen the new era of my life. However, what initially appeared as hurdles eventually turned into blessings in the form of my supervisor Dr. Shweta A. Jejurkar. She has always been a motherly figure to me. I can not envision a better mentor than her for not only a dissertation but for my whole life. I am thankful to God for making me meet this personality. I find myself incredibly fortunate to have had the instructions and guidance of such a highly respected and generous human being. With her exceptional expertise and being busy with many academic engagements, she was with me wherever I needed. She had fulfilled every commitment which made her a role model to each academician. This thank you will not be enough for all that she has done for me. It will always be my intention to revere her as any child does its mother. My heartfelt thank you to the most adorable person in my life.

Similarly, a debt of gratitude is also owed to my committee members for providing valuable feedback and suggestions from time to time.

My special thanks to Dr. Ravindra Panda, a senior professor in the department for giving me highly important insights about my topic at the initial level.

I am very much grateful to my friend and former colleague Dr. Pooja Jani-Pandya for constantly helping me whenever and wherever needed.

On a personal level, I am hugely grateful to my parents for their encouragement and support to have a higher education.

The last few people who are my life I want to thank. My two little ones, Soorashree and Hiranmayee, gave a bright little smile that put it all into perspective. I want to thank them for being a bundle of joy and laughter. I am very much thankful to my cousin-sister; Ms. Tejal Kulkarni, for her continuous cooperation and generous help. Her caring nature for my kids made me stable to work on my dissertation.

Last but not least, as my husband, Dr. Pankaj Jaje, I find it difficult to express my appreciation to him because it is so boundless. He is my best friend, my cheerleader, and an amazing father of my daughters, who is my motivation and constant support throughout the journey of my thesis. Without his willingness and positive words, my work would have taken even longer to complete. Without his love and support, I would be lost. I am grateful to my husband because he has seen me through the ups and downs of the Ph.D. process. He has shared this entire journey with me, so it only seems right that I dedicate this thesis dissertation to him.

Swaraja Ganesh Salaskar.
