

A photograph of a beach at sunset. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a warm, golden glow. Waves are breaking in the distance. In the foreground, several seashells are scattered on the sand. The largest shell is a scallop with a white and pinkish-orange pattern. Other shells include a small white one, a larger white one, and a spiral shell with orange and white stripes. The text is overlaid in the center of the image.

The sea does not reward those who are afraid of it; it rewards those who are bold and take risks - Unknown