

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It gives me great pleasure in acknowledging those individuals who have contributed in making this work successful.

First and foremost, with profound sense of indebtedness and appreciation, I wish to offer my respectful thanks to Dr. Raghavan Soman, Vice President, (Research, Camphor and Allied Products Ltd.), Malti-Chem Research Centre for introducing me to this novel topic of asymmetric synthesis and for his inspiration, encouragement and guidance throughout my Ph.D. work. I am also thankful to him for allowing me to carry out Ph.D. work while under employment at Malti Chem.

I am thankful to my co-guide Prof. A.C. Shah, Head, Department of Chemistry, M.S. University of Baroda, for his help and support during course of my Ph.D. work. I owe my gratitude to him for his several suggestions.

I am thankful to Dr. S.N. Bannore for his support and co-operation. I would also like to thank my colleagues Dr. H.A. Patel, Dr. V.K. Shukla, Dr. C.C. Shah and Dr. A.V. Bedekar for their helpful attitude. My thanks are due to Mr. K.T. Neurgaonkar, Shri V.K. Kulkarni and Mr. A.P. Dindorkar for their help in instrumental analysis. I am deeply indebted to Dr. M. Ravindranathan (IPCL), Dr. A.N. Mishra (GACL), Dr. Satendra Singh (Oklahoma University), Dr. Shashi Kumar Pillai (Alabama University), Dr. Haridas Kochat (Rice University) and Mr. Rajesh Shukla (University of North Texas) for their timely help in providing various spectral and microanalyses of my research samples. Single crystal X-ray structural analysis of my research samples by Prof. G. Newton of University of Georgia, U.S.A. are highly appreciated.

I take this opportunity to thank Shri Harshul Dalal, Chairman and Managing Director, Dr. A.P. Singh, Director (Operations) and (late) Dr. S.N. Mehra, Chief chemist of M/s. Camphor and Allied Products Ltd. for their best wishes and encouragement.

I am thankful to Mr. R. Kuttappan, Mr. M.T. Sheikh, Mr. J.C. Raj and Mr. Dinesh Shahane for their help in preparing this thesis. I am thankful to Shri Jagdishbhai Patel (Librarian), Mr. V.D. Joshi (Glass blower) my friends and colleagues for their assistance during course of my work.

Lastly, with a sense of deep respect, I would like to thank my parents with whose blessings and best wishes, I was able to achieve my target. I am also thankful to my wife and children for their everlasting wishes for the success of my research work.

Shabbir Ali S. Taj
SHABBIR ALI S. TAJ