

	Page Nos.
Acknowledgement	I
Contents	II
List of Tables	VIII
List of Graphs	IX
List of Abbreviations	XI

C O N T E N T S

Chapter I	THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE STUDY
1.1	Introduction	2
1.2	International Perspective	3
1.3	National Perspective	6
1.4	The Field of Education & The Problems in India	7
1.5	Reading as a Field	10
1.6	Importance of Reading Comprehension in India.	13
1.7	Objectives of Reading Programme	18
1.8	Approach to Reading Instruction	20
1.9	Reading in Schools	21
1.10	Towards Better Reading	23
Chapter II	PREVIOUS STUDIES IN READING
2.1	Introduction	30
2.2	Researches Abroad	31
2.2.1	Studies on Processes in Reading	31
2.2.2	Studies on Word Knowledge	33

	Page No.
2.2.3	Studies on Apprehension of Meaning	35
2.2.4	Studies on factors related to progress in reading	37
2.2.5	Studies on factors related to progress in specific aspects of reading	40
2.2.6	Studies on format	41
2.2.7	Studies on line length, type size and leading	41
2.3	Researches in India	42
2.3.1	Studies on Reading Readiness	42
2.3.2	Studies on Vocabulary	43
2.3.3	Studies on Reading Interests	46
2.3.4	Studies on Reading ability	46
2.3.5	Studies on the methods of Reading	49
2.3.6	Studies on the English Language	50
2.3.7	Studies on Comprehension in Reading	54
2.4	Conclusion	59
Chapter III	THE PROBLEM AND PROCEDURE
3.1	Introduction	62
3.2	The Statement of the Problem and Definition	62
3.3.	Scope and Limitations	63
3.4	Objectives of the study	63
3.5	Selection of the sample	64
3.6	Tools Employed	65

	Page No.
3.7	System of data collection	71
3.8	System of analysis of the data	73
3.9	Scheme of Chapters	73
Chapter IV	ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION
4.1.	Introduction	75
4.2.A	Means and SDS of the variables of the present study	77
4.2.1	Means of reading comprehension from other studies	80
4.2.2	Means of reading attitude from other studies	80
4.2.3	Means of academic motivation from other studies	80
4.2.4	Means of test-anxiety from other studies	82
4.2.5	Means of socio-economic status from other studies	85
4.2.6	Means of dependency from other studies	85
4.2.7	Means of independency from other studies	87
4.3.8	Correlation Matrix of the present study	89
4.4.8	Correlation Matrix from other studies	90
4.4.1	RC/Performance & reading attitude	91
4.4.2	Reading comprehension/performance and academic motivation	91

		Page No
4.4.3	Reading Comprehension/Performance and test anxiety	92
4.4.4	Reading comprehension/performance and socio-economic status	92
4.4.5	Reading comprehension/performance and dependency	92
4.4.6	Reading comprehension/performance and independency	93
4.4.7	Academic motivation & reading attitude	93
4.4.8	Academic motivation and test anxiety	93
4.4.9	Academic motivation & dependency	93
4.4.10	Academic motivation and independency	94
4.4.11	Academic motivation and socio-economic status	94
4.4.12	Test-anxiety and reading attitude	94
4.4.13	Test-anxiety and socio-economic status	94
4.4.14	Test-anxiety and dependency	95
4.4.15	Socio-economic status and dependency	95
4.4.16	Dependency and independency	95
4.5.C	Variables according to low/average/high reading comprehension scores	96
4.5.1	Reading attitude according to low/average/high RC scores	96
4.5.2	JIM according to low/aver/high RC scores	100

	Page No
4.5.3	TASC according to low/aver/high RC scores	104
4.5.4	SES according to low/aver/high RC scores	108
4.5.5	DEP according to low/aver/high RC scores	112
4.5.6	IDEP according to low/aver/high RC scores	116
4.6	Observations	119
Chapter V	CASE STUDIES
5.1	Introduction	122
5.2	Case study of Rekha Mahant	127
5.3	Case study of Dipti Sheth	142
5.4	Case study of Anil, Kunjar	150
5.5.	Case study of Naresh Pattani	173
5.6	Case study of Devendra Shah	184
5.7	Case study of Varsha Chatrapati	192
5.8	Case study of Jayshree Mistry	204
5.9	Case study of Suresh Patel	213
5.10	Case study of Prabha Rana	227
5.11	Case study of Manan Patel	237
5.12	Panaroma of case studies	245
5.13	Conclusion	254
Chapter VI	REVIEW, FINDINGS & SUGGESTIONS
6.1	Review of the study	260

		Page No
6.2	Findings of the study	262
6.3 A	General suggestions	264
B	Suggestions for further study	270
	Bibliography	273
	Appendices	279

*